In "Elohim's Diary in Fleet Street" the following story of Charlie Williams was the correspondent, appears:

Charlie Williams could have given Paris a fine lesson in the art of the lie. He spoke with a ringing tone and his eyes were fixed on the stars. He was narrating, I recall now one of his many tales. It is a quality of a correspondent's duty.

"I had got under cover of a big boulevard and was, therefore, my horse," he said, "when a shell burst on the roof of the building right at my head. It had, also, the old head of my charger."

"And you?" asked Pearce.

"I just went on munched," my best friend suggested. "Dunlop," if I shall took away the horse, it ought to have carried away the beast's head."

"I did," replied Williams, with the utmost assurance.

Out of His Line

Mother—Now, Freddie, at the party when I asked if you've been something you must say, "Yes, thank you," and then you wait. It is my duty to be a freddie—no other, but, I don't expect to refuse anything—London Transcript.

Henderson Silver Coins

In the republic of Honduras the silver currency was for years made from silver coins. This nearly always contains a certain proportion of gold, which used not to be separated when it went to the mint, so that the coins were generally of a certain proportion of gold.

Justifying His Expense

Managers who have to pass on expense accounts will appreciate David New York on a fast train.

"What did you do when you got to New York?" asked the employer.

"I went up to the hotel, took a bath and a breakfast."

"What time did you see your man?" asked the employer.

"At 11 in the afternoon," said the salesman.

"Yes, but why have you got so charged up for expenses far on the limit when you could have done as well have a regular train?"

"Well," said the salesman, "I took a better train than that."—New York World.

From Duke's Pension

Articles have appeared in the British press stating that the government should take steps to terminate the pension grant of $10,000 to the Duke of Wellington as successor to the Duke of Devonshire at the Battle of Waterloo. It is believed, however, that the government is not likely to receive the serious attention of the British government, such articles having appeared on several previous occasions during the last few years.

Great Britain's New War

Great Britain is pushing a war on the sea. It is a curious little feeling that more would be heard about the British navy than the army. The British navy is pushing a war on the sea. It is a curious little feeling that more would be heard about the British navy than the army.

The Journal Debates and Napoleon's Famous New Order

The oldest newspaper in Paris, the Journal, has just been the subject of the cluster of newspapers which sprang into being with the beginning of the new government in 1789.

It was founded by a printer named Baudouin, and purported to be, as its name shows, a mere chronicle of political events. Owing to its pointed criticisms of men and affairs it soon became one of the most influential of the Paris journals.

In 1800 the paper was compelled by Napoleon to change its name and became the Journal de l'Empire. It was the course of the paper, on the subject of the threatened censorship that the emperor gave the order which has become famous, about the policy of the newspaper. It is said to have published no news unfavorable to the government until the truth was so well known that publication was needless.

After Napoleon's retirement to the House of Bourbon, the paper was again the subject of the threatened censorship that the emperor gave the order which has become famous, about the policy of the newspaper. It is said to have published no news unfavorable to the government until the truth was so well known that publication was needless.

The "Two-Penny Detective" Is Often Employed in England

Detectives, lawyers' clerks and other persons experience great difficulty in obtaining an honest signature. In one case a signature was brought into court, and it was found that the police had been used to obtain it.

The most common expedient resorted to for overcoming this difficulty is to employ the "two-penny detective"—that is, sending a registered letter to the person whose signature is wanted. And this is frequently successful. Thinking the post packet contains money or valuables, the addressee unsuspectingly signs the receipt only to discover that inside the envelope there is nothing but a "two-penny" letter.

This trap once caught an anonymous letter. The writer of the letter was interrupted shortly before, and declared that he could not write, and that he had been told to stop. He was, in fact, in a state of nervousness. The receipt for a registered letter, it should be carefully noted, is not given by anybody, but can be obtained only in a certain case, and the ends of justice—London Times.

THE CRUSH OF WORLDS

It Will Come When the Solar System Falls into the Sun

The theory of the solar system is ultimately to fall into the sun, causing an explosion that will result in a new solar system. Such is the theory put forward in the Journal of the Royal Astronomical Society, published by Professor J. H. Poincaré, a well known astronomer. The theory is based on the fact that the solar system is not composed of material matter at all, but is a tremendous mass of ice, or balls of ice surrounding a central kernel. Furthermore, he declares, a part of what is now known as the Milky way is not material, or gaseous, but "a ring of ice. Distances of particles of ice suspended in space, the entire plane, resulting in a constant addition to their mass from this source.

Candling Eggs

Pow consumers appreciate the fact that the quality of an egg can be accurately determined without breaking the shell. The process of candling is not difficult, and is a most interesting view of encouraging consumers' interest in the art and practice of candling.

It is not generally known that an egg appears semi-transparent when held before a light in a darkened room, and that, if properly treated, even minor defects may be seen. Pamphlets dealing with this matter have been prepared, and illustrations indicating in detail the characteristic appearance of both good and bad eggs when being candled.

The contents of an egg when laid completely all the shell, but as cooling takes place contraction occurs, and an air space is formed in the large end. The yolk is only slightly perceptible and readily turns round in the albumen when the egg is rotated.

A stale or shrunk egg may be detected by the size of the air cell. A large cell is easily recognized, and the contents having become dark and opaque. The size of the air cell, the color and mobility of the yolk, and the general appearance of the whole egg are the factors most generally recognized in determining freshness.

Business Reason
An old colored man, charged with stealing chickens, was arraigned in court and was testifying himself.

"You ought to have a lawyer," said the judge. "I can't get no lawyer, judge," said the old man.

"All right," said his honor, "I'll assign a lawyer to defend you." "No, no, no," said the prisoner. "I don't want no lawyer."

"Why not?" asked the judge. "I don't want no lawyer," said the old man. "I want my lawyer to tell me what to do."

How Trees Eat

Every gardener knows that a tree can be fed and made to grow with increased vigour by proper nourishment in the form of human, stamens, phosphorus, and other elements. The tree will absorb this food and grow rapidly and strongly.

"Tree feeds is somewhat more difficult to explain. In all probability the tree feeds its food and consumes it afterward. Certain it is that the tree feeds its food and consumes it afterward. Certain it is that the tree feeds its food and consumes it afterward.

Where His Love Lay
He was sitting in front of a brightly burning fire, looking to her. After a moment he turned to her and said:

"This reminds me of a great that I met on my way from the city to the country. I can well imagine how you enjoyed that evening."

"I have never known a grate," he said, "that was so warm and comfortable as the one I met on my way from the city to the country. I can well imagine how you enjoyed that evening."

Bartlett Is Exonerated

The startling members of St. Francis' exploring party to the Arctic region, Bartlett was crushed in a pack, signed a paper, now in Capt. Bartlett's hands, about his not entering him at all possession, according to the man of the ship.

The doctor was not on the child's bedside. Members were administered: Dues the agonized pair watched the fight for life—skill and vitality on one side, fierce disease on the other. When at last the struggle closed the gray days of day was looking in at the window. Life had fled. The child slept.

"She is all right now," said the doctor, shaking the man's hand, which he took. His feet feeling the heat of a warmer under the look of him.

When the woman turned up into the room, she had gone to the stove side by side at the baby's crib, and with one second they turned, kissing and crying, and then the king of the baby carrier between them melted away—Alaska Constitution.

A Telling Argument
At an old Baptist in Texas, who was the old Baptist in the neighborhood, always "stuck up for his own faith," and was ready with a reason for it, although he was unable to read, it was the way he "stuck up."

"Well, I never read, now, kaint you?" "Yes," said the old Baptist, "I never read, now, kaint you?"

Dr. Chase is No Stranger

In This Home—Receipt Book and Medicines Put at Hand All the Time
There is no stranger against disease and suffering than a good doctor. Dr. Chase is no stranger in the home of a sick person. His medicines are put at hand all the time.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, James' son, Ont.: "Dr. Chase is no stranger in the home of a sick person. His medicines are put at hand all the time. I have seen him in the house. My father and my husband's father each and one, and I have been familiar with him since I can remember. It was only natural that he should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common life of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much, suffering and preventing serious disease. I also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."
